Skin cancer: Outdoor workers’ no1 enemy

An interactive exhibition to raise awareness of skin cancer, and ultimately ensure that it is recognised as an occupational disease, was initiated and organised by EADV’s Media & PR Committee in the European Parliament in Brussels on 20-22 June.

With this exhibition, EADV helped bring to the attention of policy-makers and key actors in Europe the importance of protecting the 14.5 million outdoor workers in the EU who are twice as likely to get non-melanoma skin cancer from occupational UV exposure. EADV wants to encourage a multi-stakeholder collaboration to promote sun-safe working practices, as well as educate participants on the simple and cheap techniques of sun safe behaviour and skin cancer prevention. A UV camera operated by a dermatologist helped attendees to see the sun damages and the effect of the protection with sun cream.

MEPs support EADV call

The exhibition was co-hosted and opened by three MEPs Jens Gieseke (Germany, EPP), Alojz Peterle (Slovenia, EPP) and Nessa Childers (Ireland, S&D), and a representative (Emilie van Deventer) from the World Health Organization. A photo booth with sun safe hats and gloves provided a focal point for interaction and allowed MEPs and EP staff to express support by live tweeting their photos. Many MEPs participated actively and asked for information to our members. Speakers and MEPs signed the EADV call to action.

During this event EADV also provided free skin cancer screenings to 130 people and information to MEPs, staff and invitees.

The EADV exhibition received the support of the MAC group (Members of the European Parliament against Cancer).

EADV also secured Dods/Parliament Magazine coverage (before and after the event) and Maggie Coulthard MEP (UK, S&D) said discussions had taken place within the S&D Group to support the idea of an amendment to the Carcinogens and Mutagens Directive to include UV sunlight.

Screenings

With the help of several volunteer Belgian dermatologists, EADV’s Media & PR Committee members carried out the screening of many Members of Parliament and their staff. More than 130 people, two-thirds of whom were women, completed the standard Euromelanoma questionnaire. They all received a clinical examination with dermatoscopy. In both gender groups one melanoma and two basal cell carcinomas were detected. They were referred for treatment. Eleven women and two men presented with suspicious lesions. They were advised to consult a dermatologist for follow-up. Everyone received information on the risks of uncontrolled sun exposure and the preventive measures to reduce skin cancer. Self-inspection with ABCD criteria was illustrated to the participants and highly recommended. Many expressed their interest and appreciation for this initiative.

Overview

- 130 people received skin cancer screenings
- 9 Members of European Parliament received skin cancer screenings
- People from all 8 political parties of European Parliament were screened
- People from all over Europe (15 countries)

MEPs screened

- Edward Czesak (Poland, ECR)
- Julie Girling (UK, ECR)
- Luke Ming Flanagan (Ireland, GUE)
- Sirpa Pietikainen (Finland, ALDE)
- Marietje Schaake (Netherlands, ALDE)
- Anneli Jäätteenmäki (Finland, ALDE)
- Iveta Grigule (Latvia, ALDE)
- Neena Gill (UK, S&D)
- Lynn Boylan (Ireland, GUE)

Other notable figures screened

- Ryan Heath (POLITICO – Senior EU Correspondent)
- Adam Mouchtar (EU40 – Co-founder and Managing Director)
- Annika Nowak (European Commission – Cabinet of Vytenis Andriukaitis, Health & Food Safety Commissioner)
- Gabriele Gedvilaitė (European Commission – Cabinet of Vytenis Andriukaitis)

“After the election is before the election”, is a German phrase referring to the permanent cycle of political campaigning. The life of a large association, like our EADV, cannot go on without the basics that characterise an organised community. People come and go, new ones take over through your vote and the pictures of the faces that run our Society change with a speed that sometimes obliges even those actively involved in the leadership of our Academy to ask for help in order to remember who was in office when.

Such a continuous “waste” of human resources is, indeed, required in order to motivate people to undertake a period of administrative duties in parallel with their everyday work. This procedure needs new and young people to “popularise” EADV. This issue of EADV News provides details of what is going on in the Academy’s organisation and informs you what to do in order to actively participate in its administrative life. So, don’t miss the chance to get informed, cast your vote and/or become a candidate for office!

We could equally say, “After the congress is before the congress”. We’ve just came back from the 14th Spring Symposium in Brussels, full of good impressions, a good amount of up-to-date professional knowledge and new contacts and friends and now we are already preparing for our next fixture, the 26th EADV Congress from 13-17 September 2017 in Geneva.

Do we need so many educational events? Medical knowledge is growing faster than our ability to take advantage of it! According to P Densen at the University of Iowa (Challenges and opportunities facing medical education. Trans Am Clin Climatol Assoc 2011;122:48-58), the time it took to double our stock of medical knowledge was 50 years in 1950, but only 3.5 years in 2010 and will be just 73 days in 2020. In order to keep up to date with upcoming publications, it would take us about 6275 hours each month - or 87% of our total available time! (Alper BS et al. How much effort is needed to keep up with the literature relevant for primary care? J Med Libr Assoc 2004;92:429–37). Therefore, it is essential to come at least twice a year to the Academy’s educational events; they will save you time for researching and reading, and the latest knowledge is also offered in a nice environment with additional time for networking. Geneva (2017), Budva (2018), Paris (2018), Madrid (2019) and Vienna (2020) are expecting you.

For young colleagues, for whom medical knowledge is doubling thrice every 6 years, additional events, such as our Fostering courses (now renamed EADV School – see page 11) are available. Just check the EADV website, grab the opportunity and apply for a place.

If you are not yet a member or you are not sure if you should renew your membership... then please read carefully the articles “Why join EADV? Junior members share their experience” on page 21 and scholarship testimonials on page 14. I am sure that these young people are sufficiently optimistic to offer you good arguments in order to convince you of the value of your EADV membership!

And finally, “do a good job and let others know” is the principle of the European Parliament event (cover page) and the Social Media Reporting Team (pages 8 and 9). In our fast-moving world and with the overwhelming amount of incoming information, we need to develop structured and direct strategies in order to communicate our work and its great value for the people Europe-wide. Nowadays, this has become a highly professional task.

See you again in Geneva!
Thirty years ago the Academy comprised 21 founding members with a vision. The organisation of the first annual congress in 1989 represented the initial major achievement. In 2017, EADV has emerged into a medium-sized enterprise consisting of 36 employees with almost 6000 members from more than 100 countries. It has evolved into an association with an impressive number of actions, ranging from the organisation of dozens of training courses, the allocation of hundreds of scholarships and awards, supporting research studies as well as sustainable projects in developing countries to active involvement in advocacy initiatives at European and national level. EADV provides an exchange platform for European patients and nurses’ organisations and co-operates with many different international societies. Our Academy is now a recognised player in the organisation of dermato-venereological congresses drawing worldwide participation.

Should the future have started yesterday?

That said, during the past decade, both the EADV leadership and the staff have been too heavily occupied in day-to-day management and in the follow-up of a growing volume of (sometimes also uncoordinated) projects. It is now time to ensure that EADV is able to face future challenges with the required prerequisites in place: clear strategic objectives and a lean and efficiently-run organisation. The EC leadership consequently engaged Porsche Consulting, an internationally-recognised company with vast expertise in the transformation of organisations like our own, to facilitate the development strategy.

In December 2016, a group comprising executive members, 7 committee chairs, board representatives and various senior staff members, were able to elaborate both the results of previous SWOT (Strength, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats) analyses initiated under the presidency of Prof Erwin Tschachler, as well as a novel, comprehensive survey among all board members on current challenges and projects.

The basic idea was to dissect both the internal and external conditions for strategy. The EADV leadership was able to discuss these results in-depth, and address some critical questions ranging from ‘What are our products and services?’ and ‘What sets us apart from other medical associations?’ to ‘Who are our partners now and in the future?’ and ‘What are our market disrupters and how do we become aware of them?’

The ultimate goal of this joint effort taking advantage of the broad and varied expertise of all involved participants was to respond to three key questions:

1. Why does EADV exist and what is its main purpose (Mission)?
2. What should EADV look like in 2025 (Vision)?
3. How do we recognise and find the road (Strategy)?

At the start of its 30th birthday, EADV has now been able to make significant progress. The leadership is both pleased and proud of the first conclusions obtained in the strategy development project. Mission and vision statements have been finalised. These are helpful and powerful tools providing purpose and giving short-term direction (see Figure 1).

Strategy development for 2025

The EADV leadership has translated its mission and vision into 6 strategic dimensions and detailed the corresponding objectives. The latter encompass the following:

1. Members and clients, by ensuring a regular growth of the membership base of EADV in Europe
2. Products, by continuous optimisation of EADV events, resources and services to members
3. EADV organisation, by making the organisation faster, sleeker, more effective and more responsive, by making EADV a better employer with a change of mindset and culture
4. Research and education, by becoming a leading education provider and research supporter for dermatology and venereology
5. Finance, by maintaining a solid financial background to secure the future activities.

President’s perspective

Mission statement

MISSION STATEMENT

We are dedicated to advancing patient care, education and research in the field of dermatology and venereology by providing a unique platform to bring people together and share ideas.

Vision statement

VISION STATEMENT

EADV is the leading community to further the knowledge of health professionals and advocates in the field of dermatology and venereology.
6. Stakeholders and leadership, by reinforcing partnerships with national societies, medical and research associations as well as by establishing partnerships with policy-makers, patient organisations and other stakeholders related to dermatology and venereology.

To successfully implement the strategy, 19 specific initiatives have been defined. Full support from the Board of Directors was required after a leadership meeting in December 2016, and this was given unanimously in Brussels in May 2017. Ongoing steps include the selection and prioritisation of initiatives and the start of the implementation phase. “Porsche consulting” has provided support for strategy implementation and provided clear advice as how to improve the quality and efficiency of our work. It will be essential to have a Sponsor (typically an EADV leadership representative) and a Project Leader (responsible EADV staff member) for all initiatives; tasks, deadlines and useful key performance indicators (KPIs) have of course to be clearly defined for each initiative. Finally, it will be important to put the initiatives in a proper time line to avoid an overload of projects.

I anticipate that the CEO Nancy Induni and the Executive Committee of EADV will summarise the results of the analysis of EADV’s organisation in a future issue of EADV News because significant workload has to be managed, involving the processes named by Porsche consulting.

Moving to the acceptance of the amendments to the Statutes constitutes an important and vital step to progress with the strategy development. A novel and suitable legal framework allows an efficient work flow to fulfil the strategic objectives as well as to ensure democratic function. The Board of Directors with delegates representing various European countries will become the control body of the EADV; the Executive Committee will concentrate on decision-making and co-ordinating ongoing projects with all related liabilities.

Optimisation of EADV

The proposed new framework and working methods have produced some reactions of shock, denial or non-acceptance among a few distinguished colleagues, fearing either a too ambitious workload or questioning the need to address a number of objectives, including advocacy and political actions. However, the phenomenon of resistance or sceptical attitudes to change in management are well documented and to be expected (see Figure 2). I am hopeful though that once things are up and running, all EADV colleagues will start to fully support the new way of working, the strategy implementation and the development of the required competences. The alternative is a risk of status quo, stagnation in the operative excellence and denial of the modern edge needed to continue successfully on. EADV is already showing undeniable signs of dysfunction due to too-rapid growth. It is our duty to recognise these and to act. This brings me to my final section.

The suitcase association model discarded

I came across an expression some specialists use about organisations like EADV that are called “suitcase associations” in which physicians give their free time or retirement time to act as either part-time CEOs, COOs, CFOs, or professional congress organisers at various levels (see Figure 3). This “suitcase association” model should be definitively abandoned if the goal is to become an efficient professional organisation. EADV needs an adequate project management structure with professionals responsible and accountable for the implementation of clear, defined strategic actions, which need to be regularly reviewed.

Let’s take one example: the overview of financial strategy, the drafting of a budget for the various EADV departments and the execution of daily financial operations requires an expert at Chief Financial Officer level. Is it really still appropriate that a physician acts as Treasurer responsible for the substantial flow of money and the complex budgeting? The Board of Directors should grasp the risks and downsides associated with a “suitcase association model” for our future. The professionalisation of our Academy requires both a change of culture as well as a progressive change of our governance rules. The new statutes will make the Academy more manageable.

Planning the future already in... 2005!

To end, I can’t resist sharing a memory; did you know that in May 2005, the then EADV President, Prof Johannes Ring in a President’s Perspective for EADV News, claimed “many things in our Academy move too slowly and are too complex”. He emphasised the need for “strategic planning of the future EADV”. More than 10 years later let’s salute Johannes for recognising the direction of travel back then, and finally move up a gear to the next level of operative excellence. Let’s start working together. Can we?

Luca Borradori MD PhD
EADV President (2016-2018)
With the arrival of autumn comes the 9th edition of the Scientific Meeting in Ticino promoted by the European Academy of Dermatology and Venereology.

The close and fruitful collaboration with the Dermatology Society of Ticino, the Dermatology Department of the Ente Ospedaliero Cantonale, the Institute for Research in Biomedicine, and EADV has enabled the organising committee to come together once again to create a novel and interesting joint project.

Strategically located in the foothills of the Alps and with three castles listed as UNESCO World Heritage Sites, Bellinzona provides a beautiful setting for this one-day meeting, offering stimulating topics for researchers and dermatologists in both Switzerland and Northern Italy. The topics should also attract the attention of allergologists, immunologists, internists and oncologists, by addressing areas with significant clinical and interdisciplinary overlap.

The programme starts with a basic research session in the morning and is then followed by a clinically-orientated section in the afternoon. The schedule proudly features distinguished researchers and clinicians with recognised experience in their field to discuss a number of practical, relevant advances in their fields.

Medical progress always profits from the co-operation of both researchers and clinicians by raising questions, designing clinical and scientific studies, applying new diagnostic and therapeutic methods and providing appropriate material and information on patients and diseases.

Should you find yourself in the vicinity on this day, it will be our pleasure to invite you to take part in this conference - an opportunity to exchange experiences and share approaches in our daily work.

Two reporters share their experiences

EADV: Did you enjoy attending the Symposium in Brussels and what do you think was most interesting about this event?

Elena Vankwikelberge (Belgium): For me personally, it was the first time attending an EADV event and I really enjoyed this experience. Since it was located in Brussels, it was only a half-hour drive away from home which made it easily accessible. The Symposium was professionally organised and the variety of lectures gave me the option to choose those that were most interesting to me. I loved the flexibility and range of subjects. I especially liked the lectures on topical treatment, since those were very practically given and can be applied in daily practice.

Laura Mertens (Belgium): I enjoyed attending the EADV Spring Symposium in Brussels as a social network reporter. It was a learning experience, because as a reporter it was possible to follow and to participate in a lot of lectures with different themes. It was also nice to talk and to share experiences both with the speakers and the followers of the lectures. The most interesting about this event is that it brings together dermatologists from all over the world to talk about the discipline they like the most. It creates a worldly view on the various subjects. Beautiful, passionate discussions were held, which led to new insights. I believe that the variety of themes is also a plus point for this event. There was the possibility of choosing these subjects that could be of value to you personally.

EADV: Could you describe your experience as part of the Social Media Reporting Team and would you do it again?

EV: When I got the offer to participate as a social media reporter, I didn’t hesitate. I thought it would be a unique way to discover the Spring Symposium for the first time, whilst also trying something new such as publishing content on social media. I was already active on some social media sites, such as Instagram and Facebook, but due to this opportunity I also got to discover Twitter a little bit more. Furthermore it gave me the chance to talk to different dermatologists about their opinions and experience at the conference. The event reporters’ team was also very helpful in guiding us as we did not have any experience in social media reporting and were willing to answer every question we had regarding the content we should post.

LM: We followed the lectures and during these lectures we posted on social media (like Facebook, Instagram and Twitter) about interesting facts or things we learned during the lectures. We also posted about Brussels to make the visitors to the Symposium more familiar with this beautiful city. These posts contained tips and tricks to visit the most beautiful places in Brussels and we also shared addresses where you could have a healthy quick lunch or a cosy meal in the evening. We also posted about the experiences of the guests at the event. It was very pleasant to meet all these new people. During this experience, we were supported and supervised by the other members of the Social Media Reporting team. Despite the fact that we had little experience of posting on social media before our participation in the event, everything went smoothly. I can summarise it as follows: it was a very pleasant and educational experience and I would do it again immediately!

EADV: How could other colleagues from your own country benefit from attending EADV events and participating in the Academy's activities?

EV: The benefit of attending these events is of course the knowledge you gather about the latest developments and evidence-based publications concerning certain dermatologic pathologies or therapies. The different topics on which lectures are given, leaves you with the option to choose the most relevant subject or even listen to something you might not know as much about. All of the speakers at this Spring Symposium spoke English well to a very good level and the lectures were comprehensive even for us as newly starting residents. It is a very open event which makes it possible to ask a lot off questions and have an interactive communication between the speaker and the audience.

LM: After this experience, I would recommend attending EADV events and participating in the Academy's activities. I believe our discipline continues to evolve and these events make it possible to keep up to date with the latest, evidence-based facts and hot topics. The lectures were given in well-spoken English by dermatologists at the top of their field. I believe this not only enriches our knowledge, but also inspires us to support our discipline wherever possible to enable further evidence-based evolution.

Finally, the EADV Spring Symposium was organised very well. The lectures always started on time. The welcome package contained a very clear information brochure. The accommodation was beautiful and the acoustics in the halls were perfect. The accommodation was located in the centre of Brussels and was easily accessible by car and by train. It is definitely recommended.

EADV: Prior to this experience, were you already familiar with EADV?

EV: I hadn’t been to an EADV event before, but I’ve heard about the JEADV and had read a couple of articles in it, mostly online though. I was pleasantly surprised to find this event to be broad, educational, comprehensive, well organised, flexible and a profound experience for me. Knowing this, I will definitely attend more EADV events in the future and use that knowledge to grow as a resident and dermatologist thereafter.

LM: Prior to this event, I wasn’t familiar with the events and activities of the European Academy of Dermatology and Venereology. I had already heard of EADV in the past and I regularly read an article in the journal, but I had never attended an event before. As a starting resident I still have a lot to learn. If I would have the opportunity to attend even more EADV events in the future, this would definitely contribute to my knowledge and development as a dermatologist.

Interact with colleagues and friends on social media during the EADV Congress!

The EADV Congress in Geneva has a dedicated hashtag for you to share learning, insights, and fun meetings with peers. You can use this hashtag on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram so everyone can find your posts easily. We would love to see your messages with #EADVgen!

In the meantime, don’t forget to follow EADV on social media for updates and news, to share experiences and practices, or to simply ask for opinions.

Join us on Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn, and Instagram, and actively connect and interact with other professionals in the field.

If you need help with social media interaction, please stop by the New Tech Point at the 26th EADV Congress.
Are you interested in gaining new knowledge in dermatology and venereology? Do you want to exchange your ideas on diagnosis and treatment of your patients? If so, EADV Fostering courses are surely for you. But if you are still hesitating, let me try to convince you by describing my experiences in this field.

I am a specialist in dermato-venereology working in the Department of Dermatology at the Medical University of Warsaw. My experience with EADV Fostering courses started when I was a 4th-year resident, and at the time I already had a 3-year solid dermatological background and felt my knowledge needed some systematisation.

The first EADV course I attended was Intermediate/Advanced Surgery in Brussels. It was a very practical and intensive course, because, apart from very valuable lectures, we had also an opportunity to practise our surgical skills, such as performing advancement or rotation flaps, on a pig skin. I was so impressed with the knowledge I gained during this course that I have decided to apply for the other ones.

The second EADV training course I participated in was Dermatopathology in Ghent. The course was divided into two parts lasting 5 days over two consecutive years. The course was perfectly organised, with every minute filled with lectures or practical classes with microscopes. I can recommend it to all residents, because as we know our knowledge of histopathological features of dermatological diseases is crucial to our understanding and management of diseases.

Comprehensive programme

The third EADV Fostering Course I attended as a resident was Melanoma Updates and a Short Dermatoscopy Course which took place in Zagreb. The course lasted three days and was very comprehensive, covering all the aspects of diagnostics and treatment of melanoma as well as dermoscopy of benign and other malignant skin lesions.

During EADV training courses, there is always a time designated for the presentation of difficult or interesting clinical cases delivered by the residents. It is a great opportunity to share your experience as well as train your presentation skills.

Affordable learning

What is also worth knowing – and one of the great advantages of EADV courses for residents – is that the course and accommodation are free of charge. Additionally, EADV members receive a scholarship that usually covers the flight costs.

EADV also offers Fostering Courses that are dedicated to specialists. In fact, you need to pay for them, but the fees are quite affordable.

As a specialist interested in dermato-surgery, I attended the Nail Surgery Course, which was chaired by Prof Eckart Haneke, one of the best dermatosurgeons focusing on the surgery of the nail. I found the course exquisite. The lectures covered the broad range surgery of the nail unit, such as methods of anaesthesia and problem-orientated surgical techniques.

The practicability and live demonstrations of procedures were also a great advantage of the Wound Care and Vascular Malformation EADV courses.

Trichoscopy tutor

From 2015 I have had the honour to be a tutor of the Trichoscopy EADV course which is organised by Prof Lidia Rudnicka, the head of the Department of Dermatology at the Medical University of Warsaw. This year the second edition of this course was held, hosting residents in dermatology from 16 different countries. Every time the whole team does their best to share their knowledge and experience and according to the positive feedback from the participants I think we do the job.

To sum up, by participating in EADV courses you get knowledge and practical skills, but also you have an opportunity to share your doubts with the best experts worldwide. The last but surely not least advantage of EADV Fostering courses is social networking. As a participant, you will meet new colleagues from various European countries, but more and more commonly also from other continents, and in the era of social media, believe me, these friendships will last.

Marta Sar-Pomian MD
Department of Dermatology
Medical University of Warsaw
For more than a decade, the EADV Fostering Educational Programme has worked steadily in an effort to raise standards in dermatology throughout Europe, by offering trainees and specialist dermatologists high quality theoretical and practical training.

Putting a particular emphasis on best practice to benefit patients and dermatologists alike, the Fostering Specialist Skills Committee and the Fostering Trainee Education Committee have promoted community, collaboration and exchanges between European and international dermatologists.

In the last three years alone, the number of annual courses offered has increased greatly (from 16 to 24), and registrations for the courses have doubled. Additionally, Fostering Trainee Committee Chair Prof Bertrand Richert introduced four extremely successful Master Classes, specifically for Residents, during EADV Spring Symposia: Paediatric Dermatology in Istanbul (2013), Non-Melanoma Skin Cancer in Belgrade (2014), Medical Imaging in Athens (2016), and Hair Diseases in Brussels (2017).

Networked events
The Fostering Committees hosted two networking events, first in Copenhagen in 2015 to celebrate 10 years of the Fostering courses, and then in Vienna in 2016 to bring together participants and speakers from the Fostering courses of that same year, as well as the attendees and lecturers from the Master Class in Athens. Each of the two events welcomed more than a hundred participants, who had the opportunity to meet again and share their experiences with colleagues and Committee members.

Centre of Excellence
Under the chairmanship of Prof Klaus Fritz, the Fostering Specialist Skills Committee developed a project called Centre of Excellence, with the aim to give specialist EADV members an insight into the infrastructure and knowledge related to certain topics practised in other European dermatological and venereological institutions. The idea behind this initiative was to encourage the exchange of good practice, a network, and friendship among colleagues.

What's next?
In the past year the Committees became aware that some topics only offered to residents are also of great interest to specialists, and certain topics which are only offered to specialists are also of great interest to residents. Both Committees have thus decided to merge, to work together in an effort to offer the best possible courses and meet the needs of both trainees and specialist dermatologists.

Starting in 2017 with Tropical Dermatology in Frankfurt, some courses will be open to both trainees and specialists. Moreover, the Fostering Programme will be renamed EADV School, to highlight the educational nature of this thriving venture of the Academy.

Come and see us!
Want to find out more about the upcoming courses of the EADV School? Email us or come by the EADV Booth at the 26th Congress in Geneva.
The highly anticipated 26th EADV Congress in Geneva will offer you a high-level scientific programme, comprehensive cutting-edge sessions, plenty of opportunities to network with peers and if that is not enough, you will also find...

- More than 700 star speakers with established publication records and high presentation scores
- Eminent speakers who will represent the Northern, Southern, Eastern and Western regions of the European continent, Asia, the Americas and Africa.

Did you know...

- The Geneva scientific programme is live and continuously updated on a daily basis? As speakers confirm their participation they are instantaneously inserted into the programme.
- A new search engine has been recently integrated which allows you to explore the programme by speaker, session, presentation title or keyword.
- You can also save your preferred sessions directly into your Outlook calendar as you browse the programme.

Well-known guests from other disciplines will also broaden our views with their extensive knowledge and experience.

Keynote lectures

The tracks will be complemented by keynote lectures given by internationally recognised experts including:

- Lupus erythematosus in daily practice Dan Lipsker (France)
- Beyond the sequence: The role of the genome 3D structure for cancer and ageing Tom Misteli (USA)
- Live skin imaging Kenji Kabashima (Japan)
- Why does hunger sensitize for infections? Josef Penninger (Austria)
- Do we need pigment to develop melanoma? David Fisher (USA)
- René Touraine Lecture: Update on hair diseases Ralf Paus (United Kingdom)

The spirit of difference

Award-winning photographer Rick Guidotti will open the Congress with 'The spirit of difference.' He will impress you with his photography, film and narration to explore cultural perceptions of beauty in modern society and of people living with genetic, physical, behavioural and intellectual difference. This will provide the audience with an opportunity to see individuals and their families living with these conditions as people, not just as subjects.

Clinical immunology: The new immunotherapies

One of the greatest revolutions over the past ten years has been the introduction of targeted immune therapies for psoriasis and atopic dermatitis, autoimmune diseases and now even melanoma and other skin cancers. Therefore, this year’s focus will centre around “Clinical immunology: The new immunotherapies”, for the practising dermatologist. Over 30 of Europe’s leading immunologists will teach us clinicians what we need to know about allergic, autoimmune and autoinflammatory diseases, immunodeficiencies, as well as the immunotherapies of infectious and malignant diseases.

EADV President’s Symposium

Take a look at the controversies that will be discussed during the President’s Symposium this year. These “hot topics” will surely create debate and interest:

- Psoriasis and the place of biologics: The opinion leaders’ and industry’s role Robert Stern (USA)
- Melanoma: From routine screening and sentinel lymph node to novel therapies. Is everything so clear cut? Jean Jacques Grob (France)
- Inconvenient evidence in skin cancer care Tamar Nijsten (Netherlands)

Aesthetic Sunday

The 2017 Aesthetic Sunday programme has been created by 10 globally-renowned specialists and will most certainly satisfy your requests for excellence and training in aesthetics and cosmetic dermatology. One single day will be dedicated to the basics and “hot topics” on Sunday, 17 September. Topics such as “Energy-based devices, including lasers”, “Peels”, “Fillers”, “Botulinum toxin” “Threads”, “Scars”,...
“Complications” plus much more, will be covered in 4 parallel tracks.

Practical workshops
This year we have continued to develop and strengthen our practical workshop programme. We have packed seven subjects into twelve workshops which take place from the Thursday through to the Saturday. This year we have kept popular topics, strengthened those that were new last year, and added a fresh workshop on Atopic Dermatitis. Enrolment in the programme is available through pre-registration only, which can be done through the Congress registration process. There are 360 slots available on a first-paid, first-served basis, but they will fill up fast.

Late breaking abstracts
If you weren’t able to submit your important research or latest results during the recent Call for Abstracts, you still have time to upload your investigations for the “Late breaking news session” in Geneva. Only the biggest and late-breaking studies will be considered and selected for this stimulating session.

- Late Abstract Submission Opens: 3 August, 2017
- Late Abstract Submission Deadline: 17 August, 2017

CME-CPD during the 26th Congress in Geneva

It is important to collect CME-CPD credits, not only to keep track of your participation in accredited educational activities, but also to strengthen the quality and professional status of the dermatovenerology specialty throughout Europe.

Collecting points will demonstrate your involvement in lifelong education and the importance you give to regularly enhancing your skills and knowledge.

Participation in accredited sessions will keep you up to date on the latest research and clinical advancements and will enhance your professional level.

How to collect your CME-CPD credits onsite
The only requirement is to have your badge scanned every session you attend.

How to download your CME-CPD Certificate
If you have been correctly scanned, you will be eligible to claim your CME-CPD Certificate directly online at one month after the event.

Please note:
- Subspecialty meetings and Industry sessions (Satellites and Meet-the-Experts) are not accredited by EADV
- ECMECs are recognised by the American Medical Association (AMA) or can be converted into your EU national credits.
Stay current with your scientific development!

Patient Society Village
The Patient Society Village will make its return on Friday, 15 September.

Located outside Room A&B and Room C, the Village will be offering coffee breaks throughout the day to facilitate comfortable meetings between patient organisations and congress delegates.

Be alert to scams
Please beware scam companies pretending to offer accommodation and registration to the EADV Congress (adding a percentage of commissions).

EADV scholarship ceremony in Brussels, May 2017

Three winners of scholarships to attend the 14th EADV Spring Symposium in Brussels on 26-29 May 2017 share their views on what it meant to them.

Having grown up in Australia, I am currently working as a dermatology registrar in a multicultural environment. It was amazing to see the cultural diversity reflected through the EADV community. This scholarship has given me an exciting opportunity in attending the Spring Symposium in Brussels, making new friends and visiting Europe for the first time! Thank you to the EADV society for the warm welcome and great honour.

1 Bonita Ho Yee Choy, Australia - Imrich Sarkany Non-European Memorial Scholarship

It is a great honour and a recognition of my work that I have been developing during my residency. I am in my last (fifth) year of residency in Portugal. It is good to have this opportunity to attend such an important meeting with the support of EADV. I have the chance to communicate with my peers from around the world. I find this initiative of EADV great, together with the Fostering courses and the interesting journal.

2 André De Castro Pinho, Portugal - John Stratigos Memorial Scholarship winners

For around 5 years as a resident I have been actively participating in the Academy’s activities and I have attended consecutive events including the last congress and the spring symposium. This is the first time I applied for a scholarship because I was not sure if I was competitive enough to win and I wanted to have some publications to back it up. I am very honoured to be one of the winners of the Michael Hornstein Memorial Scholarship. I accept this as a personal honour and I appreciate what EADV does for juniors, including the reduced congress and membership fees, and the fantastic Fostering courses that I have attended.

3 Uffe Nygaard, Denmark - Michael Hornstein Memorial Scholarship

July 2017
How did you find out about EADV and when did you join as a member?

I was informed about EADV for the first time two years ago by my professor and joined EADV almost immediately as a junior member. After joining this great Academy, I further realised what I had missed during my first two years in residency!

How has being a member of EADV helped you in your professional career?

I participated two Fostering courses (Bridging Dermatology and Rheumatology, 14-15 Oct 2016, Jesi, Italy and Dermoscopy Summer School, 5-9 June 2017, Vis, Croatia) which broadened my horizons. They were life-changing experiences for me. I had the opportunity to meet the experts whom I have been following through their publications and academic works.

What do you consider to be the best advantages of an EADV membership, particularly for young doctors?

You can enhance your knowledge and get up to date by either attending the events or reviewing the presentations online which often have groundbreaking researches. Moreover members have access not only to the Journal of the European Academy of Dermatology and Venereology which is a frontrunner in the field, but also can access nearly 900 other journals.

Dr Aslı Bilgic Temel (Turkey)

What do you consider to be the best advantages of an EADV membership, particularly for young doctors?

The topics that EADV addresses are focused on current issues in clinical practice which are becoming more and more complex. EADV’s proposed definitions and classifications make an irreplaceable contribution to the quality of numerous descriptive and analytical studies. In this way, EADV represents a relevant and an indispensable factor when it comes to guidelines and new directions in dermato-venereological (DV) development.

How has being a member of EADV helped you in your professional career?

EADV helps me to be more focused in my day-to-day work when it comes to both DV dilemmas and the most common diseases and conditions in this field. Due to maintaining a consistently high level, EADV ensures the adaptation of new generations of doctors into experts and a research system that adapts to changing needs. Education provided by EADV gives young doctors an opportunity to educate the next generation in their communities, and some of them may become decision-makers at state level and thus be the creators of DV development guidelines in their countries.

Dr Milica Pantovic (Serbia)

Would you recommend becoming an EADV member to your colleagues?

Yes, for sure! I would recommend all my colleagues to become EADV members. A membership to EADV is an excellent way to connect with fellow doctors from all over the world and keep your dermatologic knowledge up to date in an easy way.

Dr Deepak Balak MSc (Netherlands)

How did you find out about EADV and when did you join as a member?

I started hearing about EADV at the beginning of my postgraduate studies at the School of Dermatology and Venereology. As a resident I wrote some papers for EADV’s journal and I took part in some local congresses organised in collaboration with this Society. I decided to actively join EADV this year, because I have just finished my specialisation, and as a young dermatologist I really would like to stay connected with the experience of other colleagues.

How has being a member of EADV helped you in your professional career?

In our medical world sharing opinions, data and continuously updating our knowledge is essential to making us proper doctors; patients will benefit through better care and treatment of their diseases, and we ourselves can contribute to scientific progress, bringing our data and experience. In this sense we can play an active role, though small, in the development of medicine.

Dr Sebastiano Recalcati (Italy)
