UPCOMING CALL FOR NOMINATIONS FOR THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF THE NEW OPEN ACCESS SISTER JOURNAL OF THE ACADEMY

GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE JOURNAL AND THE EDITOR

JEADV Clinical Practice

The EADV will invite nominations for the Editor-in-Chief of a new peer-reviewed open access (OA) journal, the JEADV Clinical Practice. The journal will be a companion title to the JEADV and it aims to cater the ever-growing need of the dermatology and venereology community for open access to scientific publications as well as for more clinically-oriented and educational content. The JEADV Clinical Practice will feature practical, hands-on information directly relevant to managing the dermatologists’ and venereologists’ office and the acquisition of cutting-edge clinical skills.

We are looking for a well-published dermatologist and/or venereologist with considerable clinical experience and high academic reputation. The primary role of the Editor-in-Chief will be to ensure the successful launch and development of the journal through strategic leadership and intellectual acumen.

The successful candidate will collaborate closely with the Editor of the JEADV, the Academy and the publisher, Wiley. The Editor-in-Chief of the JEADV Clinical Practice should be a keen advocate and ambassador for OA Publishing and Open Science.

Profile of the Editor-in-Chief:

– Demonstrated publication record in the fields of dermatology/venereology and active presence in the research community;

– Previous editorial experience as editor or editorial board member (strongly preferred);

– Strong commitment to bring value to practitioners and to advance medical education;

– Willingness to embrace digital-led advancements and to engage the public through the journal’s social media platforms;

– Patient centric mindset that puts the improvement of care for people living with skin and/or venereal diseases at the heart of medical publishing.

The call for nominations for this position will soon be published on the EADV website. Keep posted on our social media and continue to visit www.eadv.org.

Questions about this position, about calls for nominations and/or information about election procedures, or simple requests for additional information may be addressed to eadvelections@eadv.org.
